K.C.'s ROUGH WRITERS 37, COWBOYS 7

1994

After seven seasons of failing to make the big game, the Roughies finally won a championship. They finished the year with a nine-game winning streak, facing elimination in all nine games after struggling to a 2-6 start. A mid-season trade with, ironically, the Cowboys, reunited Jerry Rice with QB Joe Montana, members of the Roughies' original '86 team that finished third.

AWFFL 1994 SEASON RECAP

Improbable storybook ending to an unorthodox championsip season

SWEET SCRIPT FOR ROUGH WRITERS

ANOTHER RING FOR JOE. Joe Montana's only two starts during the Roughies' nine-game winning streak were the first game and the last.

It took eight seasons, a league record six playoff bids and four Final Four appearances, but the founding franchise of the AWFFL, K.C.'s Rough Writers, finally won the league championship. The incredible twist to this improbable scenario is that the Roughies faced elimination since October. One loss in any of their last nine games would have, once again, relegated them to also-ran status. But this time, in true fantasy football tradition, luck joined the team and never left.

The Roughies' 37-3 Fantasy Bowl triumph over the Cowboys denied Way's Pokes the historic honor of becoming the league's first two-time champion. They won it all in 1991, and are now the fourth team to play in more than one Fantasy Bowl, joining the McRockers (102), Death Campers (102), and Sandy's Tight Ends (0-2). Coming off a weekly high 49 points in their semifinal matchup with Stu Bruisers, the Cowboys managed only seven points in the Fantasy Bowl, all from their bottom game. Their "Cow-Niner" top game suffered from a common Fantasy
